Adams Rite Provides New Approach to Wireless Access Control with Aperio Enabled A100

Philadelphia, PA —ASSA ABLOY Adams Rite has introduced the new A100, a keyless entry control for Adams Rite deadbolts, deadlatches and exit devices that are compatible with narrow stile aluminum & glass door applications. The wireless A100 series offers all the benefits of keyless security along with Aperio technology providing an innovative new approach to online access control. Aperio technology can instantly upgrade a mechanical door to a fully-functioning online door without the cost and inconvenience of wiring the door, greatly improving the monitoring and security level of the premises.

The A100 keyless entry control is part of the Aperio global wireless technology platform that communicates with an electronic access control system and offers real-time communication without the cost and inconvenience of traditional access control wiring. Aperio utilizes local wireless communication between the lock and a communications hub to connect to an online electronic access control system. The quick response, single card system supports HID® 13.56 MHz iCLASS® contactless credentials (full authentication, all formats), which offers seamless integration with existing credential systems.

"The A100 keyless entry control gives facility managers the ability to wirelessly monitor their facility entryway," said Michael Webb, Vice President of Product Development, ASSA ABLOY EMS&OEM Group. "Since pulling wires to the door can be very costly, our goal was to create a solution that would not only provide facilities access control security, but also to help lower installation costs."

See the Adams Rite A100 keyless entry control at ASIS International 2012 show in Philadelphia, booth #1708.
